Plaid and Mixed Coats, $5 to $25, Now 20 Per Cent. Less.

Black and Plain Colored Coats, $5 to $30, Now 10 Per Cent. Less.

We've just gone over this Women's Suit and Coat stock of ours and find that we're too many—entirely too many at this time of the year. At that it's no fault of the garments, but the blame rests on the weather, which hasn't been the kind to call for heavy wraps.

We believe this reduction will be welcome to the many women who haven't bought yet—a chance to buy a stylish Coat or two ours are all stylish—and have money left with which to purchase Holiday presents.

There isn't a garment over three months old, while the majority were bought late in November.

In Puffy, Norfolk and Prince Chap styles.

Obituary

Mankind in its mysterious ways has again been in our midst and claimed a life we are assured that the Savior of mankind has claimed a soul.

Miss Carolina Dean, the estimable wife of James R. Dean of Rivesville, departed his life on Saturday afternoon December the 15th, 1906, after six years, eleven months and twenty-eight days, of confinement of disease due to old age being the cause of her death.

Dean's maiden name was Carolyn Clayton, being a daughter of Richard Clayton, one of the old pioneers of Marion county, who died a number of years ago.

She is survived by four brothers and three sisters, namely, W. B. Clayton, who resides at Hundred, West Virginia; George and Albert Clayton, who reside at Amos, this county, and G. F. Clayton, who resides at Santa Cruz, California. The three sisters who survive here are Mrs. Charlotte Tamm, residing on Rivesville rural route; Mrs. Jane Michael, at Farmington, and Mrs. Elmina Toothman, at Amos.

On the 6th day of May, 1858, she was wedded to Richard J. Parsons, to whom three children were born who survive her, namely, State Mine Inspector, Frank Parsons, residing at Clarksburg, Harrison county; Postmaster Jefferson Parsons, of Rivesville; and Mrs. Sarah J. Spencer, Parsons, residing at Worthington.

A number of years after the death of Richard Parsons, her first husband, who died at Washington, D. C., while in the service of the U. S., she, on the 18th day of January, 1876, was wedded to James R. Dean, who survives her. To this union two children were born, namely, Harry C. Dean, who died here seven years ago and D. L. Dean, who resides with his father at this place.

On Sunday, December 10th, at three o'clock p. m., impressive services were conducted at the family residence at Rivesville by Rev. Ash, of Montana. A large concourse of friends assembled at the home of the sorrowing widow regardless of the unpleasant weather.

The word or title mother will not soon be blotted from the minds of the many sympathetic friends in attendance.

Mother, the word mother, the nearest and dearest and the greatest word on earth, a sad thought, a sad sight for infancy or youth to gaze upon the cold and death stilled form of a mother whom the mighty have acclaimed in young or middle life. Sad indeed, but when the lifeless face and form of the old and careworn mother claimed by the hand of death views the family and friends of more mature age and reflecting minds—sadness and gloom, sorrow, and distress would be a light cast if not for the assurance that the soul of that careworn mother was at rest, though sad enough it be!

Decesased was a praying wife and a praying mother and when asked by a number of her family, in regard to her future destiny exclaimed that she prayed for her family thousands of times when they had no idea or knowledge of the fact at all.

A Token of a Comfort.

And while to this the sound of that mother's voice is forever hushed and the arm that embraced and heart that ached for her loved ones beneath the sod lies cold in death, the summons of the grim reaper to you will come, but when you know not; so take your chance with mother and sweet peace will be your lot.

Decesased was laid to rest in the Musgrave cemetery on Pharaoh's run, Burial conducted by Undertaker Ell Musgrave.
